

LeapFrog Plumbing

Got gas? Many people think plumbers deal only with water and sewage. Not true! We install and repair all types of gas lines and fixtures too.

Mo's sizzling summer specials...

- Outdoor kitchens
- New gas lines for cooktops and dryers
- Fire pits & patio heaters
- Pool heaters & hot tubs
- Natural gas barbecues

We're poly-pipe certified, (better than iron)
Approved vendors of PG&E

LeapFrog Loot
$25 off
Any plumbing job*

LeapFrog Loot
$100 off
Gas line installation over $600*

LeapFrog Loot
$150 off
Tankless water heater installation*

*1 coupon per service, exp. 7/31/18

We Hop To It!

Family-owned and serving Lamorinda since 1993

green solutions!

(925) 377-6600

www.LeapFrogPlumbing.com

Noodle Theory coming to Rheem

By Lou Fancher

Photo Lou Fancher

Louis Kao, age 48, father of a 7-year-old son and twin daughters, age 5 – and soon-to-be parent with his wife, Yvonne Ling, of a fourth addition to the family due in October – loves to play with noodles. Happily, Kao's passion for Asian fusion cuisine extends beyond Chinese style ramen to Grilled Niman Ranch Beef Udon, handwrapped Shrimp and Chinese Chive Dumplings, Grilled Fulton Valley Chicken over Ginger Noodles, Pan Roasted Miso Marinated Black Cod, dry-sautéed spicy green beans and his beloved chicken thighs or wings.

These and other dishes featured at the chef and restaurant owner's Noodle Theory in Rockridge and Noodle Theory Provisions in Oakland/Emeryville, are the reason people in Lamorinda will be smiling come July. Kao, a Moraga resident, will open Noodle Theory's third iteration in the 1,200-square-foot space in the Rheem Shopping Center in Moraga after Graze closes in June. The exact hours and menu are pending; the restaurant will be open six days a week, closed Tuesdays.

In an interview, Kao is an affable, low-key fellow whose restaurants seem to be to him a happy surprise as much as they are to customers. He grew up in Palo Alto in a family that always owned food establishments—a Chinese restaurant was constant, but there was also a burrito shop, a 24-hour diner, a burger-shake-soft-serve ice cream Fosters Freeze and more. Although he learned to cook instant ramen and flip burgers, he says he had stereotypical tiger parents who pushed hard for their three sons to achieve. Semi-resistant, he complied to the pressure by enrolling in UC Berkeley, but his major—and his focus—were undeclared.

It wasn't until he and others formed an Asian charter of a fraternity that he "branched out to cooking real food" and, unbeknownst to him, began his journey to chef and restaurant owner. "At Cal, I started cooking chicken wings. I talked to my dad and by learning from him how things should be done, I finally made a better connection to him."

Taking a job in the kitchen at The House in North Beach, Kao made sauces, appetizers and other simple items, gradually progressing to more sophisticated dishes during a 10-year period. Meanwhile, after "having too much fun" at UC Berkeley, he dropped out without graduating. Several years later, he attended the Academy of Art University in San Francisco. Intending to become a computer animation artist but ultimately lacking confidence that it was the right path, he departed during his final semester. It's fair to say Kao was still searching, but for what, was uncertain.

Leap to 2007, the year Kao opened the first Noodle Theory that quickly became a hot spot due to the menu's Asian-with-a touch-of-California sensibilities. The much larger 3,000-square-foot Provisions followed in 2016. Customers appreciated the attention to quality meats, locally sourced produce and flavors that mirror the rich, tender qualities of French cuisine but include the sharpness of South Asian flavors like lime juice and chilis. "I love French food. I still remember a mushroom omelette I had in France. It was simple, but transformative, like nothing I'd ever made or tasted before," he says. "At home, I love to cook braised chicken thighs, made with shallots, butter, a little white wine or vermouth. French cuisine is romantic."

Postino in Lafayette is a local restaurant he favors. "I go out for decadence, the more the better," he says. "I don't go out to eat salad. There, the food is hardy and classic. The crabs, hand-torn croutons, mashed potatoes with horseradish cream on the side ... I never leave hungry."

Kao prefers kitchen staff who are hard working and quick to react, if less personable than front of house staff. There, interacting with customers, professional presentation and "regarding the customer as the be all and end all" is imperative. Recognizing that foot traffic and building a customer base in cul-de-sac Moraga will be a challenge, he says, "We'll see how it works out. As a resident, I want to see growth, areas that are more up-to-date."

About the licensing and approval process he must complete before opening in mid-July, he says the environmental health inspections are completed and passed; what remains is signage and other items that by now are familiar stepping stones. "I've heard the town council can be slow because they try to please everyone," is the closest he gets to worry. "Every restaurant I've opened has been different from the start of construction to when you open the door. But some things stay the same: you want people to come in, have a good time, enjoy the food. And me? Until it's fully staffed, I get to play for six months in the kitchen."

To learn more about Noodle Theory, visit www.noodletheory.com.

Defensible space guidelines

... continued from page A1

A prime example of weed abatement at this Lafayette home, though the tree on the left could use trimming. Photos Nick Marnell

This Orinda property features strong defensible space elements. The tree is not touching the roof, the landscaping is well maintained and there are no tall grasses near the structure.

Fire officials stress tree trimming, with no low branches under 6 feet from the ground. Keep the tree branches 3 to 5 feet away from the roof, and remove dead trees. "Lafayette has more trees than anywhere in our district, plus Lafayette is in a Very High Fire Hazard Severity Zone – there are bigger potential problems in Lafayette than anywhere else. Pay attention to what's going on around you, especially in the Upper Happy Valley and Hunsacker Canyon areas," said Robert Marshall, fire marshal of the Contra Costa County Fire Protection District.

Marshall also advised homeowners to keep their gutters cleaned. "People only think about cleaning their gutters in the winter, but do it in summer too. An ember can land into a clogged gutter and ignite," he said.

"We have been very fortunate in Lafayette over the past few years not to have had any devastating wildfires, and I hope the residents will take our recommendations seriously and we can have another safe year," ConFire Chief Jeff Carman said.

MOFD offers individual home assessments so homeowners can understand how unruly vegetation can prevent their home from surviving a fire. Tall grasses can be especially dangerous, Leonard said, so trim them to 3 inches. And clear out underbrush. "Grass transitions to small shrubs to large shrubs to trees. It's like building a campfire - you start with kindling, and go up to logs," Marshall said.

Leonard noted that people who live on an interior street have sometimes 15 feet of open space between their fence line and a major arterial like Moraga Way, which is a major Moraga evacuation route. Homeowners must maintain that area as the open space is on their parcel. In a heightened emphasis for 2018, the district will be leaving notices to clear the open space on approximately 350 parcels along Moraga Way.

MOFD will focus on improving its messaging this year by mailing out postcards, placing sandwich boards throughout the district, and posting information on social media and the district website, to make clear that everyone has to do their part. "Due to the semirural nature of our area and our proximity to large areas of undeveloped land, the risk of wildfire is very high," Fire Chief Dave Winnacker said. "Defensible space reduces the risk of damage to individual properties, and when taken in the aggregate, reduces the risk to entire neighborhoods and our community as a whole."

"We're burying our heads in the sand if we don't do anything," Leonard said.

Weed abatement deadline for Lafayette is May 31 and for Moraga and Orinda is June 15.

ANTIGUA DOORS
www.ANTIGUADOORS.com
sales@antiguadoors.com
321 Hartz Ave, Suite #5, Danville

THE #1 Premier Active Senior Living Community in Downtown Walnut Creek!

Our Walkability Rating of 100 = Better Health & Social Engagement!

- It's all about Location, Location, Location
- Savory Restaurant-style Dining
- Heated Pool, Spa, & 24-Hour Fitness Center
- Continuing Education & Social Events, Weekly off-site Excursions
- Optional In-Home Care, if needed, can age-in-place to 120+

Call 943-7427 Today to schedule a Tour!
www.TheHeritageDowntown.com