

Digging Deep with Cynthia Brian

Garden trends for 2019, Part 2

For optimum impact, plant in drifts or clusters. Pollinators seek fragrance and bright colors. By incorporating these flowers into your landscape you'll help save the beneficial bugs. Without them, the invasive, detrimental insects threaten our species.

Circling back to technology, artificial intelligence is taking root in the garden. Robotic mowers, drones that pollinate and "read the weeds," and wireless irrigation sensors are already in use. Walmart filed patents for drones to identify pests attacking crops. With these trends, it may not be long before we'll be able to instruct our smartphones to start the engines of a new tech device that will weed, seed and feed. Until then, let's unplug, go outside, and dig deeper!

Happy Gardening! Happy Growing!
