The home has green, energy-saving features, too. From LED canned lighting throughout, solar tiles on the roof generating electricity for the whole home, to a radiant barrier installed within the roofing system, which Post explains, "reflects the heat from the sun, and also holds the heat in the winter time, so it keeps the house more at a constant temperature."

Scott loves her walk-in pantry and the view to the front yard from the kitchen garden window, which she says will all change once her daughter moves in this fall. "But when Ashley gets here, having her beside me while I'm in the kitchen will make it the best thing ever for me."

Four other distinctive kitchens are also on the tour with the option of having lunch in a beautiful terraced garden at one of the homes. Tour tickets are $40 and $12 to reserve a gourmet boxed lunch from Lafayette's Huckleberry Cafe. Tickets may be purchased at Douglah Designs and Premier Kitchens, both in Lafayette or online at www.lafayettejuniors.org.

Proceeds from the tour will benefit major beneficiary Shelter, Inc. and minor beneficiaries: CASA (Court Appointed Special Advocates), SEED (Special Education Enrichment Development Foundation), Lafayette Library and Learning Foundation and New Day for Children.
